Toured up to the ridge at Bridger today and traversed into Bridger Gully. At around 8,000' in the trees above the most prominent snowfield, my partner and I observed very small dry sluffs confined to the new snow. Bellow Bridger Gully, my partner was able to release a slide while traversing through rocks above his intended line. This was on an east-southeast aspect at 7,500'. Photo: Cole Oshiro-Leavitt

Advisory Region
Bridger Range
Longitude

-110.92W
Latitude
45.82N
Avalanche Details: Small new snow avalanches at Bridger
Bridger Range, 2019-11-22